Blockchain network fee <sup>3</sup>:

The seller pays for the network fees. The actual fee you have to pay varies and depends, among other things, on the underlying network (blockchain protocol), the execution speed and the general network load at the time of transaction execution. The fees are charged directly by the respective network in the customer wallet.

Other costs:

Please note that there may be additional charges when depositing Fiat Money<sup>1</sup>, such as transaction fees, which may be charged by your bank, credit card provider or payment service provider depending on the payment method and amount.

<sup>3</sup> Network fees are used to reward miners or stakers for their transaction validation services on a blockchain-based network.
